I think Alternative 2 sounds like a win - win for all Californians! We really need to do more to protect the species that live and visit our state, and this seems like the best way to do that. Setting back levees is also a very attractive feature, as it produces jobs and saves property and lives. I don't expect this alternative to be selected, because it makes too much sense. Rather we will be burdened by some less wildlife friendly alternative, probably due to those cry babies in the central valley, so they can continue to pollute and over use pesticides to the detriment of all the other Californians. Remember wildlife will be affected by climate change and we should do what we can before they get hit with the hammer we are wielding.
