Comment:

Under the auspices of the California Environmental Quality Act, the Delta plan certainly has raised the craft of "piecemealing" to an exquisite fine art. Whether the BDCP plans are included in the the Delta Plan or not, The Delta Plan is guilty of piecemealing and should therefore be withdrawn and a new plan, including all elements of the project, be devised.

By piecemealing the Delta Plan, the DSC can put forward EIRs that are incomplete and thus publicly deceptive as they present a plan in pieces, each of which would give a more positive view than if all were released together. Unless the BDCP plan is included in its final draft proposal, it's piecemealing, plain and simple.
